2019.0003:0018	Homemade TV Being a Parent... Being a Child					"This three segment videotape consists of personal statements on a profoundly human theme. 'Father' by Bonnie Klein, video artist and filmmaker, is a portrait of Bonnie's husband as a father and reflects contemporary concerns about the confusing impact of feminism on family relationships. 'I Am A Child' by Joanne Giardina is a view of everyday world as seen through the eyes of a child. 'Timmy' by Susan Goddard explores the interaction of a handicapped child with his family and surroundings. This program was first aired on WXXI-TV, Rochester, New York, in April 1975, and was rebroadcast by popular request in June 1975. The program forms part of the experimental series called Homemade TV. This series constituted the first example of cooperation between a video group using half-inch videotape equipment and a public television station. It serves as a model for the kind of programming that arts, cultural, and community organizations can produce on cable and broadcast television." - Portable Channel Catalog	yes		1/2 in. 2020.0001:0008	Women Ministers Part 1					"Women/Ministers, produced by Nancy Rosin and Christine Long-Walker, aired on WXXI-TV in Rochester, New York, in June and September of 1976. The one hour black-and-white documentary focuses on the spiritual journey of Merrill Bittner, an 'irregularly' ordained priest in the Episcopal Diocese of Rochester, from her ordination in July 1974, to her resignation from the church in April 1976. The tape reflects new understandings of sexual identity in the church and documents the conflict that arises when women attempt to fully function in a highly structured institution. For this videotape, Nancy Rosin was named 'Producer of the Year' for 1976 by the Rochester Black Media Coalition." - Portable Channel Catalog			1/2 in. Open Reel

2020:0001:0252	Homemade TV: Being a Parent... Being a Child					"This three segment videotape consists of personal statements on a profoundly human theme. 'Father' by Bonnie Klein, video artist and filmmaker, is a portrait of Bonnie's husband as a father and reflects contemporary concerns about the confusing impact of feminism on family relationships. 'I Am A Child' by Joanne Giardina is a view of everyday world as seen through the eyes of a child. 'Timmy' by Susan Goddard explores the interaction of a handicapped child with his family and surroundings. This program was first aired on WXXI-TV, Rochester, New York, in April 1975, and was rebroadcast by popular request in June 1975. The program forms part of the experimental series called Homemade TV. This series constituted the first example of cooperation between a video group using half-inch videotape equipment and a public television station. It serves as a model for the kind of programming that arts, cultural, and community organizations can produce on cable and broadcast television." - Portable Channel Catalog	could not be converted		1/2 in. 2020:0001:0397	Homemade TV: Making News (A Look at Local Broadcast Journalism)	Homemade TV	Sanford Rockowitz	Portable Channel	1975, 1976	"A behind-the-scenes documentary examining the premises, practices, and pressures of the broadcast medium and how they shape commercial news shows. Produced by video artist Sanford Rockowitz in association with Portable Channel. This program won the 'DEMMY' away as the best locally produced documentary in 1974 to 1975. The program was broadcast on WXXI-TV in March, 1975, as part of Portable Channel's television series called Homemade TV. This series constituted the first example of cooperation between a video group using half-inch videotape equipment and a public television station. Thus it serves as a model for the kind of programming that arts, cultural, and community organizations can produce on cable and broadcast television. Black and white and color; 40 minutes." - Portable Channel Catalog			1/2 in. Open Reel

In its look at two local black organizations, it presents a casual and revealing perspective which would be difficult, if not impossible, for a non-black to perceive and document. 'Monroe County Community Organizers' features scenes from the People's Club, People's Liquor Store, and Youth Federation run by the non-profit corporation to provide economic stability for its service programs in the poor community; the Haiti Afro-American Cultural Center features art and music. The one hour black-and-white documentary focuses on the spiritual journey of Merrill Bittner, an 'irregularly' ordained priest in the Episcopal Diocese of Rochester, from her ordination in July 1974, to her resignation from the church in April 1976. The tape reflects new understandings of sexual identity in the church and documents the conflict that arises when women attempt to fully function in a highly structured institution. For this videotape, Nancy Rosin was named 'Producer of the Year' for 1976 by the Rochester Black Media Coalition." - Portable Channel Catalog	yes		3/4 in. 2020:0001:1257	Self-Help Productions					"Produced by a black media group with assistance from Portable Channel, this program illustrates the use of video as cultural exchange. In its look at two local black organizations, it presents a casual and revealing perspective which would be difficult, if not impossible, for a non-black to perceive and document. 'Monroe County Community Organizers' features scenes from the People's Club, People's Liquor Store, and Youth Federation run by the non-profit corporation to provide economic stability for its service programs in the poor community; the Haiti Afro-American Cultural Center features art and music. Broadcast on WXXI-TV, Rochester, New York, in October 1973." - Portable Channel Catalog	yes	https://vimeo.com/359628354				Sound	http://www.vsw.org/wp/wp-content/uploads/2022/04/202000011257_self_help_productions.pdf

Cable Report is part of a cable education process. Using half-inch videotapes from the annual National Cable Television Association Convention as a springboard, Portable Channel held a town meeting on Cable in WXXI-TV's studio. Public officials, cable experts, and interested citizens discussed cable television. In addition to taking telephone questions and comments, people watching the program were invited to participate in the discussion in the studio, a discussion which continued long after the program left the air.
